

KERSTMENU

3-gangen keuzemenu voor €42,50

APERITIEF

Glas bubbels

VOORGERECHTEN

Noordzee bisque

garnaaltjes | room | peterselie

Heldere goulashsoep

Vlees | aardappelen | groenten

Carpaccio

truffelmayonaise | pijnboompitten | rucola | Grana Padano

Carpaccio van rode en gele biet

gekarameliseerde geitenkaas | rucola | walnoten

HOOFDGERECHTEN

geserveerd met aardappelgarnituren en groenten

Hoenderfilet gevuld met paddenstoelen

Paddenstoelen mix | rode wijn saus

Zeewolf

Venkel | bospeen | tagliatelle | witte wijnsaus

Groentenquiche

Vegetarische lekkernij | rucola

NAGERECHTEN

La surprise de Noël

Verrassingsdessert van de chef

Chocolade bombe

Passievrucht | geroosterde nootjes | kerstdecoratie

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased from 1.5 million to 2.5 million. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex and diverse organisation, and it is difficult to define what it is. However, it is generally understood to be the part of the economy that is owned and controlled by the state. This includes a wide range of organisations, from the police and the fire service to the NHS and the local authorities.

The public sector is often criticised for being inefficient and for being a drain on the taxpayer's money. However, it is also responsible for providing many of the services that we all rely on, such as the police, the fire service, and the NHS. It is therefore important to understand how the public sector is managed and how it is funded.

There are a number of different ways in which the public sector can be managed. One way is to have a central authority that controls all of the public sector organisations. Another way is to have a number of different authorities, each responsible for a different part of the public sector.

The way in which the public sector is funded is also an important issue. There are a number of different ways in which the public sector can be funded, including through taxation, through borrowing, and through the sale of assets.

The way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded are both important issues. It is important to understand how the public sector is managed and how it is funded in order to be able to make informed decisions about the way in which it should be run.

The public sector is a complex and diverse organisation, and it is difficult to define what it is. However, it is generally understood to be the part of the economy that is owned and controlled by the state. This includes a wide range of organisations, from the police and the fire service to the NHS and the local authorities.

The public sector is often criticised for being inefficient and for being a drain on the taxpayer's money. However, it is also responsible for providing many of the services that we all rely on, such as the police, the fire service, and the NHS. It is therefore important to understand how the public sector is managed and how it is funded.